Teaching the Competencies through Ethics and Humanities: Curricular Standards and Implementation

In this presentation, attendees will:

- Take away planning materials and curriculum ideas for teaching ethics and humanities to medical students
- Work to identify core content and contribute to a national guide for medical schools looking to meet the LCME requirements
- Exchange ideas and strategies for teaching, including problem-solving with other ethics educators

The ASBH Bioethics & Humanities Education Task Force is a working group of ethics and humanities educators (physicians, philosophers, humanities scholars, and educators) who have developed an approach to curriculum development and planning through extensive literature review and a modified Delphi-consensus building process. In this session, participants will have an opportunity to hear and respond to draft materials and will contribute to the development of the final curricular products.

Institute for Improving Clinical Care:
Transforming Chronic Care in Academic Settings

Redefining health care for the 100 million Americans with serious chronic illness requires transformation of the health care system from one that is essentially reactive—responding mainly when a patient is sick—to one that is proactive and focused on keeping a person as healthy and functional as possible. This session will present case studies—anchored in the application of evidence-based strategies for chronic illness care and residency education—from the remarkable innovation that has taken place in the Academic Chronic Care Collaborative, an ongoing network of 48 teams from 22 medical schools and teaching hospitals.
