Fighting for Life

A showing of the documentary Fighting for Life by Academy Award-winning filmmaker Terry Sanders, which features alumni, students, staff and faculty of the Uniformed Services

University of the Health Sciences (USU). The university is a traditional academic health center with a unique focus on military medicine and public health. This powerful and emotional documentary focuses on the role USU plays in educating leaders in military medicine and looks at the care they provide to service men and women injured in combat.

The Acceleration of Technology: Its Impact on Education and Society
Ray Kurzweil

As information technology achieves each new level of price-performance and capacity, new applications become feasible and existing business models lose their viability. Ultimately, every industry will be transformed as it becomes increasingly subject to the law of accelerating returns. The business models for the media industries are already under siege. Medicine is now in the early stages of a profound transformation from hit-or-miss techniques to precise strategies that reprogram the information processes underlying disease and aging. Education will move to a decentralized system no longer restricted by the availability of trained teachers in each town and village. Renowned inventor, entrepreneur, author, and futurist Ray Kurzweil will expand your mind as he shares his vision of the future.
