RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE ORGANIZATION OF STUDENT REPRESENTATIVES

THE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN MEDICAL COLLEGES

ADOPTED BY THE ORGANIZATION OF STUDENT REPRESENTATIVES
October 28, 1971

APPROVED BY THE COUNCIL OF DEANS
October 29, 1971

The Organization of Student Representatives was established with the adoption of the Association of American Medical Colleges Bylaw Revisions of February 13, 1971.

Section 1. Name

The name of the organization shall be the Organization of Student Representatives of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

Section 2. Purpose

The purpose of this Organization shall be 1.) to provide a means by which medical student views on matters of concern to the Association may find expression; 2.) to provide a mechanism for medical student participation in the governance of the affairs of the Association; 3.) to provide a mechanism for the interchange of ideas and perceptions among medical students and between them and others concerned with medical education; and 4.) to provide a vehicle for the student members' action on issues and ideas that affect the multi-faceted aspects of health care.

Section 3. Membership

A. Members of the Organization of Student Representatives shall be representatives designated in accordance with the AAMC Bylaws by each institutional member that is a member of the Council of Deans, selected from the student body of each such member by a process appropriate to the governance of that institution. The selection should facilitate representative student input. Each such member must be certified by the dean of the institution to the Chairman of the Council of Deans.

B. Each member of the Organization of Student Representatives shall be entitled to cast one vote at meetings of the Organization.

What kinds of communications are provided for OSR representatives?

The chairperson and regional chairpersons of the OSR communicate with members by means of periodic newsletters. OSR members also receive the minutes of the annual meeting, Administrative Board meetings, and their respective regional meetings.

The office of AAMC President John A. D. Cooper sends informational reports on current items, particularly those relating to legislation, to members of the AAMC Assembly and to all OSR members. Dr. Cooper also provides a Weekly Activities Report (WAR), which goes routinely to the members of the OSR Administrative Board and is available to all OSR members for the price of postage.

How does OSR relate to local medical student bodies?

Communication with locals is facilitated by our publication, the Bulletin Board, which is an insert in the AAMC's STudent Affairs Reporter (STAR). It is issued approximately four times per year. Copies are distributed to all medical schools. It contains items about OSR and AAMC activity of general interest to medical students. OSR representatives should suggest to their student affairs deans some "strategic" locations for posting the Bulletin Board.

The relation between the OSR and the locals should be a two-way street: the OSR provides information to you about what we are doing, and you provide information to us about what you're interested in doing and having us do for you. The degree to which medical students are aware of the current activities of the OSR and the AAMC--and therefore also the degree of effectiveness of the two-way street--is primarily dependent upon the initiative of OSR members. Each OSR member should try to determine appropriate means for informing his or her fellow students about what's going on, stimulating interest, and obtaining feedback. Suggested mechanisms are periodic announcements or class meetings; discussions at meetings of the student council, student government, or local AMSA and/or SNMA chapter; or just informal lunch-hour or other-hour raps. The medical student cause is best served where there is an informed constituency that appreciates the importance of current issues in medicine and the opportunity to make input that could influence the directions of the profession.

Representatives shall meet at least once each year at the time and place of the annual meeting of the Council of Deans in conjunction with said meeting to elect a Chariman and other officers, to recommend student members of committees of the Association, to recommend to the Council of Deans the Organization's representatives to the Assembly, and to consider other matters of particular interest to students of institutional members. All actions taken and recommendations made by the Organization of Student Representatives shall be reported to the Chairman of the Council of Deans.

IV. MEETINGS OF MEMBERS AND COUNCILS

Section 1. Meetings of members of the Association shall be known as the Assembly. An annual Assembly shall be held at such time in each October or November and at such place as the Executive Council may designate.

Section 2. Special meetings of the Assembly may be called for any purpose by the Chairman, by a majority of the voting members of the Executive Council, or by twenty voting members of the Association.

Section 3. All meetings of the Assembly shall be held at such place in Illinois, the District of Columbia or elsewhere as may be designated in the notice of the meeting. Written or printed notice stating the place, day and hour of the meeting and, in case of a special meeting, the purpose or purposes for which the meeting is called, shall be delivered not less than five nor more than forty days before the date of the meeting, either personally or by mail, by or at the direction of the Chairman or persons calling the meeting, to each member entitled to vote at such meeting.

Section 4. The Institutional Members and Provisional Institutional Members that have admitted their first class shall be represented in the Assembly by the members of the Council of Deans and a number of members of the Organization of Student Representatives equivalent to 10 percent of the members of the Association having representatives in said Organization. Each of such representatives of Institutional Members and Provisional Institutional Members that have admitted their first class shall have the privileges of the floor in all discussions and shall be entitled to vote at all meetings. The Council of Academic Societies and the Council of Teaching Hospitals each shall designate a number of their respective members as members of the Assembly, each of whom shall have one vote in the Assembly, the number from each Council not to exceed one-half the number of members of the Council of Deans entitled to vote. All other members shall have the privileges of the floor in all discussions but not be entitled to vote at any meeting.

Section 5. A representative of each voting member shall cast its vote. The Chairman may accept the written statement of the Dean of an institutional member, or provisional institutional member, that he or some other person has been properly designated to vote on behalf of the institution, and may accept the written statement of the respective Chairmen of the Council of Academic Societies and the Council of Teaching Hospitals designating the names of individuals who will vote on behalf of each member society or hospital. The Chairman may accept the written statement of the Chairman of the Council of Deans reporting the names of the individuals who will vote as the representatives chosen by the Organization of Student Representatives.

Section 6. One-third of the voting members of the Association shall constitute a quorum at the Assembly. Except as otherwise provided herein, action at any meeting shall be by majority vote at a meeting at which a quorum is present, provided that if less than a quorum be present at any meeting, a majority of those present may adjourn the meeting from time to time without further notice.

Section 7. Each Council of the Association shall meet at least once each year at such time and place as shall be determined by its bylaws and designated in the notice thereof for the purpose of electing members of the Administrative Board and officers.

Section 8. Regional meetings of each Council may be held in each of the geographical regions established by the Executive Council for the purpose of identifying, defining and discussing issues relating to medical education and in order to make recommendations for further action at the national level. Such meetings of each Council shall be held at such time and place as determined in accordance with procedures approved by the Executive Council.

Section 9. No action of the Association shall be construed as committing any member to the Association's position on any issue.

Section 10. Robert's Rules of Order, latest edition, shall govern all meetings.

the OSR chairperson; and (5) plans the annual and regional meetings of the OSR.

The annual meeting is the big extravaganza where everyone gets together, where all the issues are discussed, and where the general priorities are set. But much of the business of the organization is conducted at the Administrative Board meetings. The Administrative Board is responsible for coordinating and interpreting the input and implementing action.

How do medical students participate in committees and task forces of AAMC?

Many standing committees of the AAMC have student members. At each annual meeting, a list of these committees is distributed and OSR members may submit application forms for committees in which they are interested. Based upon these applications, the OSR Administrative Board submits its list of recommended nominees to the AAMC Chairman, who formally appoints the committee members. In virtually all cases, the Administrative Board's recommendations are approved by the AAMC Chairman.

Occasionally (about two or three times per year), the AAMC creates a task force to intensively study and recommend policy on a current issue. Such task forces may have one or more student members, and the selection is made through recommendation by the OSR chairperson to the AAMC chairman. If time permits, the decision is made by the entire Administrative Board rather than by the chairperson alone.

These committees and task forces meet from one to about four times per year. They offer to individual students a unique opportunity to become closely involved in one area of medical education. Some of the OSR's most effective contributions have been achieved in the context of these committees and task forces.

When the OSR takes formal action on an issue, what happens?

OSR actions may be forwarded to the AAMC Assembly or the AAMC Executive Council, where they would be considered for possible AAMC action. If approved as an AAMC action, it may, as appropriate to the issue at hand, influence the educational or administrative policy of the medical schools and the AAMC, or it may be incorporated into the AAMC's federal testimony.

Other alternatives would be to send the items as information to one or more of the AAMC's Groups or committees.

addition, the leaders of the four groups jointly recommend student members to such groups as the National Board of Medical Examiners, the Council on Medical Education of the AMA, and the NIRMP Board of Directors. This kind of cooperative effort among the four national medical student organizations is essential for the maximization of the effectiveness of medical student political activity.

What kinds of OSR meetings are there?

The Annual Meeting occurs each fall, in October or November. Regional meetings (central, northeastern, southern, and western) are held in the spring, usually in conjunction with the GSA regional meetings. Administrative Board meetings occur four times per year, immediately prior to each Executive Council meeting.

What happens at the Annual Meetings?

At the Annual Meetings, the OSR meets as a whole, and has the opportunity to take formal actions. Officers are elected for the coming year. Regional caucuses and various kinds of discussion groups also take place. The AAMC holds plenary sessions, featuring speakers of national medical and political renown. OSR members are able to participate in the activities of other groups of the AAMC, and to become acquainted with AAMC staff members and other prominent individuals who are active in medical education at the local and national level.

What happens at the regional meetings?

The regional meetings are held each spring, usually in conjunction with GSA regional meetings. The atmosphere is generally more informal and the meetings more unstructured than at the Annual Meetings. Usually there are some formal action items, joint meetings with GSA, and free discussion. Any action item which is approved in identical form at all four spring regional meetings becomes an official OSR action.

What is the Administrative Board?

The Administrative Board consists of the OSR officers: the chairperson and vice-chairperson, four regional chairpersons, a variable number of representatives-at-large, and the immediate-past-chairperson. It meets four times per year and performs the following functions: (1) reviews OSR proposals and actions; (2) coordinates OSR projects; (3) recommends student nominees for committees and task forces of the AAMC; (4) reviews the agenda of the AAMC Executive Council and the COD Administrative Board, and passes on its recommendations to each group through

V. OFFICERS

The officers of the Association shall be those elected by the Assembly and those appointed by the Executive Council.

Section 1. The elected officers shall be a Chairman, who shall preside over the Assembly and shall serve as Chairman of the Executive Council, and a Chairman-Elect, who shall serve as Chairman in the absence of the Chairman. The Chairman-Elect shall be elected at the annual meeting of the Assembly, to serve in that office for one year, and shall then be installed as Chairman for a one-year term in the course of the annual meeting of the Assembly the year after he has been elected. If the Chairman dies, resigns, or for any other reason ceases to act, the Chairman-Elect shall thereby become Chairman and shall serve for the remainder of that term and the next term.

Section 2. The officers appointed by the Executive Council shall be a President, who shall be the Chief Executive Officer, a Vice President, a Secretary and a Treasurer, who shall be appointed from among the Executive Council members. It shall set educational standards and criteria as prerequisites for the elections of members of the Association, it shall consider applications for membership and it shall report its finding and recommendations with respect thereto to the Assembly.

Section 2. The Executive Council shall consist of fifteen members elected by the Assembly and ex officio, the Chairman, Chairman-Elect, President, the Chairman of each of the three councils created by these Bylaws, and the Chairman of the organization of Student Representatives, all of whom shall be voting members. Section 3. At least one elected member of the Executive Council shall be from each of the regions of the Association.

Section 4. The annual meeting of the Executive Council shall be held within one hundred twenty (120) days after the annual meeting of the Assembly at such time and place as the Chairman shall determine.

Section 7. In the event of a vacancy on the Executive Council, the remaining members of the Council may appoint a successor to complete the unexpired term. The Council is authorized at its own discretion to leave a vacancy unfilled until the next annual meeting of the Assembly.

VII. COMMITTEES

Section 1. The Chairman shall appoint from the Assembly a Resolutions Committee which shall be comprised of at least one

What are the "Groups?"

There are several constituencies, involved in medical education, which are organized into entities called "groups" in the AAMC. The two Groups of greatest concern to the OSR are the Group on Student Affairs (GSA) and the Group on Medical Education (GME). The Groups may make input to the AAMC but do not have any membership or voting representation in the governing bodies of the Association.

The GSA consists of the Deans of Student Affairs of the U.S. medical schools. The OSR usually holds its spring regional meetings in conjunction with those of the GSA. Issues of mutual concern include the admissions process, student advising, and NIRMP.

The GME consists of faculty representatives who are active in areas of curriculum, student evaluation, and research in medical education.

Why an OSR?

The question is sometimes raised as to why the AAMC set up a new student organization rather than obtaining students representation from pre-existing groups such as the American Medical Student Association (AMSA) and the Student National Medical Association (SNMA). The answer is that the structure of the entire AAMC is such that its governance is provided through sub-groups of the Association, and not by means of independent groups. These sub-groups make their input to AAMC, and not externally. This permits emphasis of the unity of the AAMC as a voice for the entire community of academic medicine, and lends the maximum possible weight to positions of the Association.

The OSR is not intended to compete with other student groups in any way. Medical students have a common cause, and the OSR is to be viewed as one very important vehicle for student action. Indeed, many OSR representatives have also been members of independent medical student organizations and have been active in these as well.

How does the OSR relate to other national medical student groups?

Since its inception, the OSR has had an ongoing dialogue with AMSA. In 1974, this communication was extended to include SNMA (the independent organization representing minority medical students) and the Student Business Session (SBS) of AMA. Officers of the four student groups share with one another the organizations' positions on major issues throughout the year, and get together every several months to personally exchange views. In (The AAMC Assembly will be considering a Bylaws amendment at the 1976 Annual Meeting to increase the number of OSR seats on the Executive Council from 1 to 2.) This group conducts the affairs of the Association between Annual Meetings, and meets four times per year.

The Executive Committee, consisting of the president, chairman, and chairman-elect of the AAMC and the chairmen of COD, CAS, and COTH, is the group that renders decisions when there is insufficient time to wait for a regular meeting of the entire Executive Council.

COD, CAS, COTH, and OSR each have an Administrative Board which meets four times per year (immediately before each Executive Council meeting). Throughout the year, the constituencies make their input to the Executive Council through their Administrative Boards.

What is the OSR's place in the AAMC's governing structure?

The OSR was created as a "sub-councillor" entity; we are not on an equal footing with "the three councils" (COD, CAS, COTH). As specified in our bylaws, we "report to" the Council of Deans, and all of our major actions are "subject to review and approval" by the chairman of the COD. However, we have one voting member on the Executive Council of the AAMC, and 11 voting members on the Assembly. Therefore, we can always bring any issue or proposal directly to the Executive Council or the Assembly by means of these voting members, notwithstanding our "sub-councillor" status. Nevertheless, the reality of the situation is that the COD possesses almost half of the voting strength in the AAMC, and a motion made by the OSR is unlikely to have significant impact on AAMC policy unless it has substantial support in the COD. The power structure may be diagrammed as follows:

representative from each Council of the Association and from the Organization of Student Representatives. The Resolutions Committee shall present resolutions to the Assembly for action by it. No resolution shall be considered for presentation by the Resolutions Committee unless it shall have been received at the principal office of the Association at least fourteen days prior to the meeting at which it is to be considered. Additional resolutions may be considered by the Assembly upon a two-thirds vote of the members of the Assembly present and voting.

Section 2. I. JUST ABOUT EVERYTHING YOU'LL EVER NEED TO KNOW ABOUT OSR

What is the OSR?

The Organization of Student Representatives was established in 1971 as the mechanism through which medical students participate in the governance of the Association of American Medical Colleges. OSR membership consists of one representative from each of the nation's medical schools.

What is the AAMC?

The Association of American Medical Colleges is the organization that speaks with a single voice for the academic medical community. It represents all 116 U.S. medical schools and their medical students; 400 U.S. teaching hospitals; and 60 U.S. academic and scientific societies. These constituencies achieve their representation through the Council of Deans (COD), the Organization of Student Representatives (OSR), the Council of Teaching Hospitals (COTH), and the Council of Academic Societies (CAS). The AAMC has a permanent full-time staff whose members work together with the elected representatives of the constituencies in formulating positions and coordinating various activities.

What is the AAMC's focus?

The AAMC is dedicated to the advancement of medical education. All issues relating to medical education, biomedical research, and patient care are of major concern to the AAMC.

An important area of activity is federal liaison. The AAMC keeps its members informed on legislative issues, and provides testimony and consultation upon request to Congress and federal agencies.

What is the governing structure of the AAMC?

The highest governing body of the AAMC is the Assembly, which meets yearly at the Annual Meeting. Voting representation on the Assembly is as follows: COD, 115 votes; CAS, 57 votes; COTH, 57 votes; and OSR, 11 votes.

The Executive Council of the Association consists of 22 members, as follows: the president, chairman, and chairman-elect of the AAMC; 9 representatives of COD; 4 representatives of CAS; 4 representatives of COTH; 1 representative (the chairperson) of the OSR; and 1 "distinguished service" representative.

carrying out the business of the year and working on the issues enumerated at the Annual Meeting. The Chairperson and Vice-Chairperson are participants in the Council of Deans meetings and sit on the 21-member Executive Council which sets policy in the Association.

The area which I have tried to expand on this year and which I feel has added to our effectiveness is working on special projects for the OSR. Because of our position within the AAMC we are able to use unique data and resources that are not available to other groups. Last year we developed an accreditation handbook which will be sent to medical student leaders some months before school site visits by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education. It explains the basis for accreditation, outlines what role students play in the process, and offers suggestions for criteria by which to evaluate your school's program and facilities. We have also initiated a study on area in the medical school environment that result in non-productive stress. Our long-range plan is to recommend curriculum to assist students in coping with the stresses in the medical school environment before they become detrimental to our goals and to the educational process.

If you have ideas about changing medical education, bring them to the Annual Meeting. This year we have allocated more time for discussion groups than ever before. The OSR works with interesting problems and decisions. You are welcome to be a part of them. I look forward to meeting you at the Annual Meeting.

1976 OSR Handbook

October, 1976

Dear OSR Member,

Greetings! All of you, I am sure, have varying ideas and concepts about what the OSR is. Your membership in the Organization shows that you have an interest in problems and trends in medical education. I hope this introductory statement will be helpful to you concerning the OSR.

After serving as Chairperson of the OSR for one year, I can say with assurance that the OSR exists as the only medical student group that has ongoing and direct input into the governing bodies of medical education.

The governing bodies of the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) are comprised of the deans of all U.S. medical schools, the directors of the specialty programs which will provide our graduate medical education, and the administrators of the teaching hospitals that will employ us. We, the students, are the consumers of this medical continuum that encompasses our body and mind from the moment we take the infamous MCAT exam until the day we receive certification in our specialty board. Before 1971 we, the consumers, were not represented in the decisions that affected our training and education. The OSR was formed to provide student input to all levels of undergraduate medical education from the admissions process through the first post-graduate year. You and I are here because we are not satisfied with this process and we want to work on improving it.

How does the OSR do this? We start by appointing medical students to committees in the Association such as admissions assessment, minority affairs, financial problems of medical students, health services advisory, and data development. We are on task forces that have studied licensing exams, health manpower legislation, and most recently are investigating problems of minority students and financial aid. These are not token appointments. They are usually for two year terms, and although students are initially inundated by the amount of material they must review, they are surprised at the way they are listened to and the way their opinions are respected and utilized in final reports of the committees and task forces. It is at this level which involves the greatest number of medical students that I feel we are most effective.

The eleven-member OSR Administrative Board meets four times per year immediately preceding meetings of the other governing councils of the Association. We are charged with
