

Anthony Kulukulualani

President
Student National Medical Association

Anthony Kulukulualani graduated Summa Cum Laude from North Carolina State University with a B.S. in Biological Sciences and Plant Biology. A third-year medical student at Tufts University School of Medicine, he currently serves as the National President of the Student National Medical Association. He is a member of his school's Multicultural Fellows Council and was a physical diagnosis coach in the TUSM/University of Massachusetts Boston Enrichment Program. With an interest in a career in academic medicine, he served as a Medical Education Representative for courses such as Immunology and Introduction to Clinical Reasoning. He also worked as a teaching assistant for a Health Sciences Honors Course at the undergraduate campus of Tufts University. Anthony conducted research at the Environmental Protection Agency for two years prior to matriculating into medical school, where he assisted in animal studies and analyzed biological data which resulted in a peer-reviewed research publication. He has continued his interest in research as a medical student by completing a summer research project focused on understanding the racial climate for minority faculty in academic medicine and identifying challenges to their recruitment, retention and promotion. Anthony also had the privilege of being a recipient of the 2013 Minority Scholars Award from the American Medical Association Foundation, which awarded eight students across the nation a $10,000 scholarship towards their medical education.
