

Council of Faculty and Academic Societies Progress Report

SNAPSHOT

The Council of Faculty and Academic Societies (CFAS) is the AAMC’s affinity group directly representing medical school faculty and academic societies. Through a variety of initiatives, CFAS seeks to be a voice on behalf of medical school faculty and academic societies within the leadership structure of the AAMC. CFAS has disseminated a number of AAMC advocacy sign-on letters to academic societies; actively participated in a number of AAMC meetings, workshops, and events; and published a meeting session created by CFAS as a paper in Academic Medicine.

CFAS reps have engaged in the National Academies of Medicine Action Collaborative on Clinician Well-Being and Resilience, which is co-sponsored by the AAMC, ACGME, and more than 30 other health professions organizations. CFAS reps have also presented multiple sessions at the AAMC’s annual meeting along with other AAMC-sponsored seminars and professional development conferences.

Additionally, CFAS has engaged in an AAMC initiative to study salary equity issues among clinical chairs at member institutions, published the online “CFAS Diversity and Inclusion Toolkit,” and maintained the AAMC’s “Well-Being in Academic Medicine” website. CFAS also maintains a faculty advocacy webpage on aamc.org and has taken the lead in an ongoing effort to define faculty.

Other information:

- There are a total of 90 CFAS representatives with PhD or MD-PhD degrees
- New member societies:
 - The Academy for Professionalism in Health Care (APHC)
 - American College of Radiology (ACR)
 - American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry (AAAP)

2019 CFAS MEMBER STATS

Society reps	123	Senior reps	182
		Junior reps	168
School reps	227	Chair or vice chairs	87 (30% women)
Total reps	350 (50% women)		