1. Vice President Delivers Remarks about Cancer Moonshot

Vice President Joe Biden Oct. 28 delivered the White House’s weekly address highlighting the progress of the White House Cancer Moonshot initiative. The Vice President’s remarks come after last week’s release of the Cancer Moonshot Task Report that discussed the progress made during the first year of the initiative. The Vice President noted that the report is “everything from enhancing prevention efforts, expanding access to care, and forging an international commitment to this fight” and added that the “private sector is also reimagining what it can and should do. In just the last few months, more than 70 new public and private sector commitments have been made…”

2. Senate Majority Leader Highlights the Importance of NIH

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) Oct. 26 highlighted (beginning around the 24:30 mark) the importance of NIH at a research grant ceremony at the University of Kentucky. Leader McConnell noted that there are “two things that are health-related that either have been done or will be done by the end of this year…” Leader McConnell continued with, “One is a massive increase in NIH funding, which is a top priority of mine.” The Majority Leader also said that there is strong bipartisan support for the 21st Century Cures bill, and noted that “we are going to do it before the end of this year.” McConnell also noted that he has a “particular interest in regenerative medicine.”

3. NHGRI Director to lead Trans-NIH GeroScience Interest Group Seminar

From the Human Genome Project to Precision Medicine: A Journey to Advance Human Health
Thursday, November 3, 2016
12:00 p.m. – 1:00 p.m.
Masur Auditorium, Building 10, NIH

The Trans-NIH GeoScience Interest Group (GSIG) was formed to discuss the relationships between the biology of aging and the biology of diseases and conditions that are studied across the NIH. The National Human Genome Research Institute (NHGRI) Director Eric Green, M.D., Ph.D., will lead a discussion on the work of NHGRI and its work to accelerate the application of genomics to medical care. The seminar will be video cast here.
