Understanding and Addressing Microaggressions in the Workforce

PART I
Today’s Agenda

• Group Norms
• Definitions of terms
• What are microaggressions?
• How often do microaggressions happen?
• What are the impacts of microaggressions on various marginalized groups?
• How do we address microaggressions as the receiver or as the bystander?
Group Norms

1. Be Smarter than Your Phone
2. Confidentiality
3. Use “I” Statements
4. Co-construct Knowledge
5. Share the Airtime
6. Reserve the Right to Change Your Mind/Okay to feel uncomfortable
7. Suspend Judgement
8. Any additional Group Norms?
Definitions

• Implicit Bias

• Microaggressions
  • Microassaults
  • Microinsults
  • Microinvalidation
Implicit Bias

- Im-plic-it bi-as /im plisit bi s/: The attitudes or stereotypes that affect our understanding, actions, and decisions in an unconscious manner.

- Activated involuntarily, without awareness or intentional control. Can be either positive or negative. Everyone is susceptible. Having biases doesn’t make you a bad person – it only makes you human

  ~ Kirwan Institute
What are microaggressions?
And
How often do microaggressions happen?
Microaggressions

- Microaggressions are brief and commonplace daily verbal, behavioral, or environmental indignities, whether intentional or unintentional, that communicate hostile, derogatory, or negative slights and insults toward marginalized groups.

  ~ Derald Wing Sue, 2007
Microassault (Often Conscious)

- A microassault is an explicit racial derogation characterized primarily by a verbal or nonverbal attack meant to hurt the intended victim through name-calling.

~ Derald Wing Sue, 2017
Microinsult (Often Unconscious)

- A microinsult is characterized by communications that convey rudeness and insensitivity and demean a person’s racial heritage or identity.
- Microinsults represent subtle snubs, frequently unknown to the perpetrator, but clearly convey a hidden insulting message to the recipient from a marginalized group.

~ Derald Wing Sue, 2017
Microinvalidation (Often Unconscious)

- Microinvalidations are characterized by communications that exclude, negate, or nullify the psychological thoughts, feelings, or experiential reality of a person from a marginalized group.

~ Derald Wing Sue, 2017

- a. In the 1st column, check-off any unproductive behaviors which you have observed in meetings.
- b. Then in the 3rd column, check off any of these behaviors that you have ever done.
- c. Look back over the list, and imagine what needs the person/you were attempting to fulfill with each of these behaviors. Write these unmet needs in the 4th column.
- d. Please plan to share with the larger group.

How do we address microaggressions as the receiver or as the bystander?
Type of Change Agents

- Actor

  - The actions of an Actor do not disrupt the status quo, much the same as a spectator at a game. Both have only a nominal effect in shifting an overall outcome.

  - The actions of an Actor do not explicitly name or challenge institutionalized systems of oppression which is necessary for meaningful progress towards social justice.

~ https://www.whiteaccomplices.org/
Type of Change Agents

- Ally
  - Ally is typically considered a verb – one needs to act as an ally, and can not bestow this title to themselves.
  - The actions of an Ally have greater likelihood to challenge institutionalized systems of oppression. An Ally is like a disrupter and educator in spaces dominated by privilege group membership.

~ https://www.whiteaccomplices.org/
Type of Change Agents

- Acomplice
  - The actions of an Acomplice are meant to directly challenge institutionalized systems of oppression, colonization, and White supremacy by blocking or impeding racist people, social injustices, policies and structures.
  - Realizing that our freedoms and liberations are bound together, retreat or withdrawal in the face of oppressive structures is not an option.

Activity – Checklist for Allies and Accomplices

Checklist for Allies and Accomplices: Tools and Strategies to Increase Your Capacity and Effectiveness as Change Agents (A Place to Start)

Directions:

1. Read each of the following and rate how often you effectively demonstrate these skills.

2. After you are done, put a check mark next to the ones you would like to work on.

3. Share with a partner one of the selections you are proud of and one that you want to work on.

4. Please plan to share with the larger group.

Directions:

1. Read each of the following and rate how often you effectively demonstrate these skills.

2. After you are done, put a check mark next to the ones you would like to work on.

3. Share with a partner one of the selections you are proud of and one that you want to work on.

4. Please plan to share with the larger group.

1. Consistently treat interactions and group dynamics with equal regard to the autonomy and engagement of all members, and speak up when you notice exclusionary comments and behaviors.

2. Cultivate relationships with other members of privileged groups who actively work to dismantle oppression and create inclusive organizations. Talk honestly about where you get stuck and ask for feedback and coaching.

3. Continue to deepen your awareness about privilege and dominant culture, and how these operate in your, allied, and organizational systems.

4. Recognize and act on the moment when you are operating out or stereotypes, privilege, and/or dominant cultural beliefs.

5. Track patterns of negative differential treatment on members of marginalized groups and intervene to stop inappropriate actions and educate others.

6. Support others when they question or challenge uninclusive or disrespectful behaviors or policies so they are not alone. Recognize that marginalized group members have a far greater risk of being challenged and silenced.

7. Recognize and intervene when unconscious biases and prejudice are impacting opinions and decisions.

8. Continually learn more about the experiences of members of marginalized groups and oppression.

9. Recognize when members of marginalized groups might be reeling out of cumulative impact, and offer space to talk about issues and their experiences.

10. Analyze policies, programs, services, and practices to assess any differential negative impact on members of marginalized groups and shift practices to create change.

11. Track current utilization of services and assess the degree of satisfaction and usage by members of marginalized groups.

12. Regularly assess the climate and culture of organizations and analyze the data for any differential experiences from members of marginalized groups.

Activity: What Could You Do?

Directions:

1. Choose 1-2 examples of microaggressions and exclusionary situations.

2. Write each one in the left-hand column.

3. Then discuss and note how you could address the situation in the other column.

4. Please plan to share with the larger group.
