Instructional Design and E-Learning Survey Report
The Group on Information Resources (GIR) - Online Interactive Educational Materials Project Team of the Education Technology Work Group has developed a white paper that explores the needs of instructional designers in the field of medical education, with an ultimate goal to identify common practices, share teaching and learning technologies, and to recommend the resources for instructional designers.

During the academic year of 2018-2019, the Project Team developed and implemented a plan. This plan included 1) determining useful information that instructional designers want and/or need to know, 2) developing a comprehensive online survey, 3) collecting and analyzing the survey data, and 4) disseminating the results to the greater AAMC community. This report is the direct result of the survey findings. You can access the report here.

AAMC files amicus brief in DACA case
The AAMC, joined by 32 other health professional education organizations, filed an amicus brief in a U.S. Supreme Court case on the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program. Oral arguments in the case are scheduled for Nov. 12. The brief argues that medical schools, hospitals, and patients have come to rely upon the DACA program, and that the health care workforce stands to lose an estimated 27,000 professionals if DACA is rescinded. The Harvard admissions case: 5 key takeaways for medical schools
While a federal district court judge recently upheld Harvard University’s use of race-conscious admissions policies, medical schools would be wise to revisit their own. Geoffrey Young, PhD, senior director of student affairs and programs for the AAMC, recommends five key takeaways that can be gleaned from the court’s decision. Read More

AAMC president and CEO connects with learners in new #HeartToHeart series
AAMC President and CEO David J. Skorton, MD, has launched a weekly conversation series on social media, #HeartToHeart, to connect with premed students, medical students, and residents. Each week, Dr. Skorton shares experiences from his journey in medicine and invites learners to share their own experiences. Read More

Now accepting session proposals for the GWIMS and GREAT Joint Professional Development Conference
In 2020, the AAMC Graduate Research, Education and Training (GREAT) Group and the AAMC Group on Women in Medicine and Science (GWIMS) will hold a joint conference on September 10-12 in Chicago. This unique event will bring advocates for women’s advancement and leadership in science and medicine together with faculty and administrative leaders of biomedical PhD, MD-PhD, and postdoctoral programs, enabling networking and exploration of new opportunities for synergy between these communities. We are now accepting proposals for sessions focusing on strategies and solutions to address issues at the intersection of gender equity, biomedical training, and the biomedical workforce at large. Read here about submitting session proposals: due January 6, 2020.
